

Marci Yaremko Biography

Marci Yaremko has served as a Director's designee to the Pacific Fishery Management Council since 2009, and as head of the California Delegation to the Council since 2013. In this role, she develops policy positions and management recommendations for California on federally-managed fisheries, including salmon, groundfish, highly migratory and coastal pelagic species, and Pacific halibut. The Council is a congressionally-established body tasked with developing federal fishery management plans, advising the National Marine Fisheries Service (NMFS), and recommending fishery regulations and measures to protect essential fish habitat. The Council is comprised of 14 voting and five non-voting members from state and federal agencies, tribes, and a variety of stakeholder interests. Four members are from California.
